Description

This superb kilim originates from Senneh--now Sanandaj--in Iranian Kurdistan, in western Iran, in the heart of the Zagros Mountains. This region boasts a remarkable textile tradition, particularly prized by connoisseurs for the fineness of its weaves, the precision of its designs, and the richness of its compositions. This piece, made around 1920, perfectly exemplifies this craftsmanship.The composition is particularly captivating. Four large geometric medallions with sharply defined outlines run the entire length of the kilim. Linked together, they form a central column that lends the piece a beautiful sense of unity. Surrounding them, a multitude of small stylized flowers, arranged with astonishing regularity, enliven the central field. The numerous borders, themselves richly decorated, frame this composition with precision. Despite the abundance of motifs, nothing appears overloaded; each element naturally finds its place.The colors are magnificent, featuring a particularly successful combination of deep indigo blues and terracotta reds with slightly coppery undertones. The four medallions stand out against the midnight blue background, while their ivory outlines add light and depth. The borders offer a more nuanced palette, blending saffron yellow, golden ochre, brick red, deep brown, and blue. These plant-based dyes possess a beautiful intensity without ever losing their harmony. This interplay between warm colors and the depth of the blues gives this piece a very strong visual presence.Senneh Kilim - IranWoven wool on cottonPlant-based dyesCirca 1920Dimensions: 280 × 123 cmIn perfect conditionChoosing an antique rug or textile is often a matter of serendipity.
