Description

These two allegorical sculptures of beauty and music depict female figures clad in antique-style drapery, in a classical style characteristic of 18th-century decorative art.Each statue adopts a graceful, slightly swaying posture, with particularly expressive rendering of the movement of the fabrics, the folds of the garments, and the treatment of the hair. The delicately sculpted faces lend the ensemble a great sense of softness and a beautiful decorative presence.The two figures rest on their substantial, architecturally designed stone bases, which fully contribute to their elegance and monumental character.Over time, the stone has developed a superb patina. Traces of erosion and the marks of time enhance their authenticity and charm.This pair possesses remarkable decorative appeal,
