Description

Large butcher's block from the 1960s with a sycamore top and a solid beech frame. Constructed with end-grain wood to withstand the butcher's blows. The corners and legs are reinforced with metal plates. The back panel is adorned with a cast-iron bull's head. Practical, with its stainless steel knife rack and two deep drawers. Fully restored, it is in good condition and can be used by aspiring chefs or simply as a decorative piece. As is often the case, the surface of the tabletop has been scraped over time and is not perfectly flat. However, it is smooth and even.Weight: approximately 100 kg
