Description

A beautiful console table made in Emilia during the second halfof the 18th century, in the Rococo style, characterized by a refinedwooden frame that is richly carved and embellished with a gilded and patinated finish.The piece features a contoured top with a surface decoratedin faux marble, with a wavy and sinuous profile, connected to an under-top bandfinely carved with ornamental scroll motifs, rocaille elements, and a centralmask.Of particular interest is the supporting structure, consisting ofarched and undulating legs, decorated with elaborate plant, foliage, andornamental motifs, joined by a central crossbar. The antique patina and the warm tones of the gilding enhancethe decorative quality of the carving, making this console table an interestingexample of 18th-century Rococo-style
