Description

I am offering this rare Chinese painter's cup made of crackled porcelain with a glaze known as "peach skin," in a "oxblood" color with superb green and pale pink highlights.This painter's cup is shaped like a beehive, with a wide, rounded body rising to a narrow neck and a flared rim.A scholar's object that belongs alongside items related to calligraphy and painting.A mark on the underside consists of a double blue circle overglazed on a crackled white background. The double circle is typical of the reign of Emperor Kangxi in the 18th century, when these painter's cups reached their peak.In remarkable condition.
