Description

dating from the late or post-Kandy period(1597-1815), in the early or mid-19th century, in Sri Lanka. The Buddha is seated in meditation, his legs in the lotus position, his hands resting gently on his knee sin dhyana mudra (the meditation gesture). He wears a sheer robe that hugshis robust body and highlights his idealized silhouette, revealing apart of his chest and one arm. The Buddha's face is gentle: almond-shaped eyeswith heavy eyelids are framed by arched eyebrows, a strong nose, andfull, expressive lips. His round face is framed by largeears with long, drooping lobes, and topped by short, curly hair.Provenance Eric Dutocq, Ananta Kama Gallery, Bangkok
