Description

An antique light-colored stone column from a building in the Dordogne. Its smooth, cylindrical shaft rests on a molded base with stepped sections. It is topped by a capital carved in relief, adorned with large veined leaves and scroll motifs.The simplicity of the shaft highlights the relief of the capital. The stone, with shades of beige and cream, features an irregular patina, rounded edges, and visible chips, particularly at the base. Cavities are also visible on the shaft and the base.To be displayed on its own as an architectural element or as a pedestal for a sculpture, as shown in the photograph.Column height: 144 cm.Provenance: An old building in the Dordogne.The statue is displayed for decorative purposes.
