Description

A charming and rare vase with a bulging ovoid shape, rounded shoulders, and a short, tapered neck, resting on a flat base. Crafted from thick, multilayered glass with a satin-finished surface, this vase features a delicate floral design composed of white daisy blossoms with yellow centers, integrated into the glass using the intercalary decoration technique. The flowers appear to float weightlessly against a nuanced marbled background, achieved by vitrifying colored powders that transition harmoniously from pale yellow at the neck to a luminous aqua green on the body, and finally to a deep cobalt blue at the base. The thickness of the glazed wall, particularly visible at the neck, lends the piece a remarkable sense of optical depth--a characteristic of the innovations in Nancy
