Description

These two chromolithographs have retained the distinctive freshness characteristic of this stone-printing technique. Highly intriguing and very much in the spirit of their time, they depict the various stages of life according to age, with one version for men and another for women. Women are, of course, depicted in misogynistic roles of self-sacrifice and subservience, while men are portrayed as handsome and triumphant. Presented in their original carved wooden frames.Shipping available in France and internationally; please contact me for details
