Description

An elegant sangria set made of hand-thrown and glazed ceramic, consisting of a large, lidded sangria pitcher with a globular body resting on three feet, featuring two wide side handles, seven truncated-cone-shaped cups, and a small bowl with a handle.The set features a rich, hand-painted geometric decoration characteristic of Robert Picault's creations in Vallauris during the 1950s and 1960s. Against a creamy white background, friezes of Greek frets, chevrons, crosshatching, and radiating motifs unfold in a harmonious blend of turquoise green and manganese brown.The variations in the motifs from one cup to another lend the set a particularly appealing decorative rhythm, while maintaining a remarkable chromatic unity.A fine example of Robert Picault's ceramic work, combining the
