Description

An elegant rectangular iron side table with a naturalistic design imitating bamboo canes and their nodes, which may have been intended to serve as a stand for a birdcage.It features a top surface bordered by faux-bamboo slats, resting on a base that opens to reveal two side-by-side drawers fitted with brass pull knobs.The structure rests on four cylindrical legs with protruding rings evoking bamboo nodes, joined at the bottom by a wide crossbar, also edged with faux-bamboo slats.The four legs are fitted with small casters.This piece reflects the taste for naturalistic furniture and Far Eastern-inspired motifs, which were particularly popular in European decorative arts at the end of the 19th century.The iron was originally painted black but has recently been refinished in glossy red. The brass pull knobs and
