Description

"Pick-up" cabinet made by the Belgian firm De Coene Frères in the 1940s-1950s. Its origin was confirmed by Noël Hosten, a specialist and head of the archives at De Coene Frères.The cabinet is made of sycamore maple veneer, resting on four tapered legs, with decorative brass elements.The front features three decorative panels made of Limoges porcelain (stamped), with hand-painted designs depicting modern figurative compositions that blend abstraction, surrealism, and fantastical scenes.One of the panels bears the full signature of an artist yet to be identified, partially obscured by the panel's sagging within its frame. The other two panels feature marks or monograms that have yet to be identified.The top panel, which serves as a lid, conceals a compartment designed to hold a record player. The original turntable was replaced
