Condition : Parfait état

Description

The optimism of the 1980s also influenced the jewelry industry.It seemed as though all the world's problems could be solved easily and, above all, quickly.As in fashion, jewelry design sought opulence, color, and cheerfulness, without ever being overwhelmed by the fear of going overboard.This 750 white gold bangle, crafted by a goldsmith from Valencia, features ten large coral cabochons, ten rubies, and small diamonds covering the ends.The section set with coral and rubies alone measures 7 × 3.5 cm.It was crafted with great technical skill, as was always the case in Valenza's workshops; the artisan's mastery is evident in the details, such as the ends studded with small diamonds and the perfect proportions.The bracelet weighs a substantial 85 grams.
