Description

A magnificent solid oak table in the Renaissance-Louis XIII styleOur table, which is quite tall, rests on four turned baluster legs connected by four crossbars that form a framing brace at the base of the legs.The apron is entirely adorned with deep carvings along its entire perimeter.The front and back of the apron feature different sculptural motifs; these are complemented by floral motifs carved in relief and arranged as applied decorations. The front apron crossbar is fitted with three drawers.Our piece is likely a work from the late 17th-early 18th century that was restored and updated in the second half of the 19th century, as was the case with many pieces of furniture.The piece is topped by a thick tabletop carved with a "beak of corbin" motif around its entire perimeter, This top is
