Description

A very beautiful and significant polychrome plaster chapel sculpture from the late 19th/early 20th century.It most certainly depicts Saint George slaying the dragon.It could also be Joan of Arc: the youthful face, long hair, slender waist, and scabbard decorated with fleurs-de-lis on a red background suggest this.The arm is removable, and the piece is in perfect condition: no breaks, no missing parts. Signed on the base: "Desvergnes and M. Marron, publishers in Orléans."Maximum height: 182 cmHeight to the head: 165 cmWidth: 50 cm
