Description

A magnificent transition-style sideboard with marquetry, richly ornamented with gilded bronze, and a white veined marble top.Crafted by the Daïdé cabinetmaking workshop in Paris--a high-quality French piece dating from around 1950.René Daïdé remains modest, but with this distinction, he is one of the greatest cabinetmakers and marquetry artists; he heads a company whose reputation has spread beyond national borders, and which is now in the spotlight.The Daïdé workshop, specializing in the reproduction of high-end furniture from the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries, produces the finest pieces.A flagship of the nation's cultural heritage--the equivalent, to draw a comparison that highlights the significance of this craft, which is not always brought to the forefront by
