Description

An elegant hexagonal high relief, presumably carved from Belgian black marble, depicting two horses in a naturalistic landscape, embellished with architectural and botanical elements. The composition stands out for the depth of the relief, the finesse of the carving, and the particular attention paid to the anatomical rendering of the animals. The work is set within a refined hexagonal gilded bronze frame, decorated with palmette motifs and topped by an original horseshoe-shaped hanging element. European manufacture, 19th century.
