Description

An iconic piece from the renowned Swiss house De Sede, this DS-700 armchair is a bold statement of 1980s postmodern design, seamlessly blending luxury and industrial aesthetics.

The enveloping tub-style backrest is upholstered in full-grain red leather, dramatically accented by radiating decorative stitching in black leather fanning out from the center -- the model's unmistakable visual signature. The deep, generous seat wraps around the sitter for a truly comfortable experience.

At the back, the structure makes no effort to hide: a perforated silver steel shell is supported by bundles of red lacquered metal tubes, all resting on a low circular black base. The interplay between exposed industrial materials and refined leather is a design statement in its own right.

Overall condition is good, with minor surface cracking on the seat cushion consistent with normal wear -- this only adds to the character of the piece without affecting comfort or aesthetics.
