Description

Iconic and timeless, this Barcelona chair and ottoman set embodies one of the absolute masterpieces of twentieth-century design, imagined by the great architect Ludwig Mies van der Rohe in 1929 for the occasion of the German Pavilion at the Barcelona Universal Exposition.

The structure rests on characteristic X-shaped feet, crafted in polished flat chrome steel, true visual signatures of this universal design. On this elegant framework, the cushions of the seat, backrest and ottoman are held by a network of crossed straps, and upholstered in carefully tufted black leather, punctuated by a regular grid of exposed buttons that give the entire piece its refined and sculptural appearance.

This is most likely a reissue or vintage copy from the 1960s, making it a collection piece in its own right, endowed with a beautiful patina of time. The leather surfaces and chrome elements present a satisfactory condition. The internal support straps, visible on the reverse, display significant wear and darkening, authentic witnesses to the antiquity of the piece.

A prestigious duo to integrate into a contemporary interior, a reception space or a characterful office.
