Description

An architectural or woodwork element carved from solid oak, depicting a draped cherub with outstretched arms surmounting a scalloped pediment with leaf-shaped volutes. The forearms and wrists are attached using original tenons and dowels, which explains why the right hand appears raised in the photos after simply pivoting on its axis. An antique wrought-iron mounting ring on the back allows for hanging. Baroque period, 17th or 18th century. Dimensions: height 47 cm - width 52 cm. The piece has a very beautiful decorative presence despite cracks in the wood, some fragility, small chips, and clearly visible signs of age.
