Description

A shell-shaped sculpture by Stéphane Herbelin, made of polychrome plaster.It is an organic, open, and enveloping form, sculpted from the material itself. The surface is entirely engraved with hatching and scratches, and accented with ultramarine blue, white, brown, and red. The interior, deep and rich in contrast, evokes the sea or a stormy sky. The exterior, warmer in tone, features shades of rust and blue. The rim has an irregular, silvery border.This is a unique and expressive piece that would look great on a console table, coffee table, or shelf.In good condition, with small areas where material is missing along the rim. These are part of the raw, unfinished look intended by the artist.
