Description

Composed of woodcut sheets, sewn together and partially colored, with matching illustrations and text.The collection consists of 23 booklets, two of which exist in three copies each and one in four copies; another pair has the same cover but different contents.The booklets can be considered 19th-century "manga": even today, the word "manga" can refer to many different types of works, such as single cartoons, scattered drawings, more elaborate illustrations, comic strips, comic books, as well as animated drawings. Starting, then, from the premise that there is no single "manga form" but rather various ways of conceiving objects and graphic forms--all of which can be described by this word--the term "manga" can be traced back to literary and essayistic usage in Japan as early as the 18th century to refer, as mentioned above, to drawings and sketches. However, it was not until the first half of the 19th century that the term became established, thanks to the gradual publication, beginning in 1814, of Katsushika Hokusai's 15-volume collection of illustrations, studies, graphic divertissements, and detailed two-color prints.If, on the other hand, one wishes to give the word the more specific meaning of "sequential illustrated stories," then its debut must be placed in the second half of the 19th century, similar to what occurred in Europe and the United States with comics.The booklets are in good condition.ARAROT0165075
