Description

Elegant decorative krater-shaped vase crafted from natural veined alabaster, in the Neoclassical style, probably made in Italy between the late 19th century and the first half of the 20th century.The vase is entirely carved from a single block of alabaster, carefully turned and sculpted in a design inspired by classical antiquity.Its structure features a broad moulded upper rim, a slightly flared body and a distinctive gadrooned decoration around the lower section. The composition is supported by a turned pedestal with circular mouldings, resting on a square base.The natural alabaster displays beautiful warm shades of ivory and honey, enriched by delicate grey veining and amber tones that lend depth and movement to the surface.The monolithic construction, harmonious proportions
