Description

American pocket watch, complete with chain, "Hamilton Watch Co.," 1914.  Hamilton Watch Co. was founded in 1892 in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and began producing pocket watches that immediately enjoyed a good reputation, until it caught the attention of the first American railroad company, for which Hamilton produced the Broadway Limited. During World War I, Hamilton became the official supplier to the U.S. Army. Between 1920 and 1930, the company devoted itself to producing Art Deco watches, staying ahead of the times and trends with cutting-edge materials that once again made their mark on the history of watchmaking. During World War II, Hamilton no longer sold its products to the public, as production was almost exclusively dedicated to the armed forces, with
