Description

Impressive white marble sculpture -- Attributed to James Pradier (1790-1852)19th-century French school An elegant and significant white marble sculpture depicting a young woman in the classical style, delicately seated in a pose imbued with grace and sensuality.The figure, with a bare torso, wears a refined hairstyle adorned with a wreath of flowers. A flowing drape envelops her legs, revealing remarkable sculptural skill in the rendering of folds and volumes.The finesse of the modeling, the softness of the facial features, and the harmony of the proportions evoke the artistic world of James Pradier, a famous 19th-century French sculptor, particularly renowned for his idealized depictions of women.This work captivates with its balanced composition, classical elegance, and the quality of its
