Description

Two elegant Chinese panels made of beige patterned silk, likely from the sleeves of an old robe, richly embroidered with multicolored threads and gold thread.The design features scholar's objects, vases with flowers, a phoenix, stylized clouds, and longevity mushrooms (lingzhi)--symbols of happiness, prosperity, and longevity in Chinese tradition.One of the panels is adorned, in its upper portion, with a poem written in Chinese ink calligraphy.A fine example of traditional Chinese embroidery from the late Qing Dynasty.Period: late 19th century or early 20th century, circa 1880-1910.Condition: generally good condition, with a few stains on the silk and slight signs of wear from age. The two panels are stapled to Isorel boards (see photos).Dimensions of the first panel: 58.8 x 14
