Description

"Cyma" full hunter pocket watch, circa 1920, including the chain. The Swiss watchmaker Cyma was founded in 1862 by brothers Joseph and Theodore Schwob in the Jura region. In 1891, the Schwob brothers joined forces with engineer and entrepreneur Frédéric Henri Sandoz, owner of the Tavannes Watch Co. This partnership enabled them to industrialize production and open new factories in Tavannes and La Chaux-de-Fonds. In the late 1920s and 1930s, the Cyma-Tavannes group became one of the largest watch manufacturers in Switzerland. During World War II, Cyma was one of twelve factories selected by the British Ministry of Defense to supply military watches to soldiers. Cyma is currently owned by the Hong Kong-based Stelux International Group and continues to produce Swiss watches.
