Description

Catavinos or "scrapie." Silver. 18th century.A vessel known as a "catavinos" or "tembladera " (because it has no foot), made of unpolished silver, featuring two flat, curved handles adorned with simplified plant motifs, as well as a row of "morsels " (raised motifs) along the rim, accentuated by bands of incised dots that remain raised on the interior of the piece, where they extend and frame the background decoration. In this area is a flower, highlighted by a dotted line. "Bernegales" and "morsels" were common motifs in 17th-century Spanish goldsmithing, but they were generally relegated to somewhat less prominent positions in the 18th century. Compare it to pieces such as the silver "bernegal" from the last third of the 17th century in the Lázaro Galdiano Museum (possibly from the Portuguese
