Description

A superb polychrome natural silk tapestry, woven on a Jacquard loom in the late 19th century (circa 1890-1900). The weave replicates traditional embroidery patterns from the Ottoman Empire The density of the threads on the reverse side confirms its high-end craftsmanship. This large-format textile (125 x 225 cm) has a heavy yet supple drape. It is perfectly suited as a collector's wall hanging or bedspread. In very fine condition; the silk has retained all of its original luster, suppleness, and the fresh vibrancy of its dyes.
