Description

A Ghoum Pahlavi rug made of very high-quality, fine, silky wool, crafted in Iran around 1950, in the mid-20th century.It features a rich floral composition, adorned with bouquets of multicolored flowers set against an elegant architectural design that alternates between positive-relief ivory niches and negative-relief balusters in shades of chestnut and old gold. The balusters are embellished with delicate, cascading floral scrolls, lending depth and refinement to the overall design.The rug is enhanced by a wide emerald-green border, framed by two tobacco-colored counter-borders, delicately adorned with floral garlands.A remarkable piece due to the fineness of its wool, the richness of its design, and the harmony of its colors.Period: Circa 1950Origin: IranMaterial: Fine, silky
