Description

Fireplace made of Valmarecchia "pietra serena," dating to the late 16th century.Material and origin: Crafted from a fine local gray pietra serena typical of Valmarecchia, characterized by a compact grain that has allowed for fine carving and the extraordinary preservation of details over the centuries. The stone displays a beautiful period patina with delicate natural hues.The jambs (legs): The most prized elements are the two majestic corbelled jambs, finely carved in bas-relief. They feature elegant volute motifs and vertical geometric-floral decorations (braided patterns or stylized scales) that evoke the classical Renaissance style typical of the artisans active in the Montefeltro region and the Romagna-Marche hinterland during the 16th century.The entablature (pediment): The monumental lintel
