Description

Dated to around 1820, this Restoration-era writing set is made of bronze and brass. The set rests on a rectangular tray featuring side handles, a brass base, and an openwork gallery decorated with arcades; the entire piece is raised on claw feet with foliage motifs.The desk set is organized around three main elements: two side inkwells shaped like ancient craters and adorned with friezes of figures in relief, and, in the center, a taller element supported by two intertwined dolphins beneath a basin. Small cups or vials for accessories complete the arrangement of this refined cabinet piece.
