Description

Antique plaster study of the young Italian warrior, also called 'Busto di giovane guerriero'. The original has been made in the 15th century by Antonio del Pollaiuolo and is now part of the collection if the Museo Nazionale del Bargello in Florence. This plaster bust is an original 19th century piece, in the back you can see the original inscriptions 'Antonio del Pollaiuolo - Museo Nazionale Florence'. This sculpture depicts a young Florentine nobleman or warrior wearing a helmet and an elaborately decorated breastplate (cuirasse) adorned with relief figures. This piece has been made in Italy and has been standing for years in the archives of the academy of Antwerp.
