Description

A Biedermeier-style console table dating from the first half of the 19th century, circa 1820-1840.The rectangular top, featuring two small drawers with round handles, rests on a central lyre-shaped base. The curved side panels, finished in black, are joined by narrow vertical wooden slats representing the strings of a classical lyre.The base ends in a moulded central plinth with four legs curving outwards. The lyre was a common decorative motif in Neoclassicism and the Biedermeier period, inspired by the art and architecture of Classical antiquity.Dimensions: 67.5 W x 37 D x 78 H cm
