Description

An elegant and original reversible stool in 1960s Scandinavian design, attributed to designer B.J. Hansen, manufactured in Norway by Sjöholt.The piece stands out for its unique multifunctional design, intended to be used both as a comfortable stool and, when turned upside down, as a practical side table.Crafted from wood in warm brown tones, likely teak or rosewood, it features a refined circular structure supported by four tapered legs, characterized by elegant, contoured ends.The seat is complemented by a circular padded cushion, upholstered in black leather-effect fabric, which creates a pleasing contrast with the wood.An interesting example of mid-20th-century Nordic design, in which functionality, versatility, and formal elegance come together in a compact object with a
