Description

Iranian kilim from the Fars region (southwestern Iran), wool, circa 1960. Very good condition.This Kashkuli features an original design with vibrant colors. Eight colorful diamonds featuring the "comb" motif* and bordered by the "flowing water" motif stand out against a solid red background with a checkered pattern. In the center, five flowers add a touch of softness and originality. A border on a blue background repeats the heart motif and is framed by two "running water" borders. On either side, two polychrome bands complete this beautiful, authentic kilim.*Comb: The comb, the hand, and the fingers symbolize fertility, the desire for marriage, and the protection of offspring against the "evil eye."Flowing water: trickling water representing life.Abrache: a term referring to
