Description

An elegant Italian modular bookcase from the 1960s, characterized by a refined modernist design, clean lines, and an asymmetrical geometric composition typical of mid-20th-century Italian furniture.The structure, crafted from veneered wood in warm, natural tones, consists of three vertical elements supported by posts with floor-mounted bases.The composition harmoniously alternates enclosed storage compartments and open shelves, offering a functional and decorative furnishing solution.On the left side is a large storage unit with two hinged doors; the central section includes a closed compartment and several open shelves, while the right side features two storage units arranged at different heights.The distinctive interplay of solid and open spaces lends the
