Description

Description : This French Restoration period armchair, circa 1825, has a carved walnut frame with a warm brown finish. The slightly reclined rectangular back is topped by a low crest carved with two opposing scrolls around a small central foliate motif. Delicate leafy sprigs extend to either side, and the broad rail below the crest shows the figure of the wood.The open arms sweep forward and curl inward into generous scrolls above square blocks. Carved volutes at the tops of the front legs echo the shape of the arms, while the legs curve down to small scrolled toes. The rear uprights extend into saber legs, and the bowed front rail follows the rounded edge of the seat.The seat and both faces of the backrest are covered in cream damask with gold-colored motifs. The woven design combines classical urns
