Description

A lovely brass iron rest adorned with symmetrical openwork cutouts featuring scroll motifs and two birds facing each other with outstretched wings around a central medallion--decorative elements typical of the Art Nouveau style.Weight: 420 grams. This type of stand was indispensable in the past, before electric irons became widespread, when cast-iron irons were heated directly on a stove or coal-fired range and had to be set down during ironing without damaging the surfaces.Today, this iron rest can serve as a trivet or simply be used as a decorative piece.
