Description

Description :This early 20th-century Louis XV style side table has a square top with a serpentine outline on all four sides. The warm, honey-toned veneer is arranged in four symmetrical panels, with the diagonal grain meeting at the centre. A narrow band of contrasting dark wood follows the curves of the top and frames the central field. As the light moves across the surface, the changing direction of the grain brings out subtle shifts in tone and emphasises the geometric pattern.A single drawer is set into the shaped apron. Its front is veneered in a chevron pattern that echoes the top and is fitted with a small, round metal knob decorated with a floral rosette. The table stands on four slender cabriole legs that taper towards the floor, carrying the curves of the apron through to the feet. The top shows some scratches
