Description

A rare and remarkable 17th-century closed, a true masterpiece of woodworking and carving that attests to the excellence of early decorative art. It is composed of 17th-century panels and components and was reassembled during the 19th century. A magnificent, one-of-a-kind piece that was featured in an interior design magazine and belonged to a prominent French collector. (see picture)With a majestic presence, this piece stands out for the richness of its carved decoration, the delicacy of its ornamentation, and the elegance of its architectural composition. Its two richly carved doors feature a highly refined relief decoration, combining sculpted figures, plant motifs, Renaissance decorative elements, and panels with deeply molded frames.The pediment, the carved posts, the cluster motifs, the
