(abbreviated as ANAL), which encompassed all artistic and scientific disciplines. This group comprised two sections:the Functional section:a sculptor, a painter;an architect, an interior designer;the Analytical Section:a mathematician, a physicist;a sociologist, a psychologist.In 1972, he became a member of the organizing committee for the Salon de la jeune sculptureIn 1973, he received the Bourdelle Prize. That year, the jury consisted of Emmanuel Auricoste, Robert Couturier, Émile Gilioli, Étienne Hajdu, Étienne-Martin, Alicia Penalba, and Antoine Poncet. This prize comes with a cash award of 2,000 francs and entitles the winner to a solo exhibition at the Bourdelle Museum. This exhibition took place from May 29 to September 30, 1975; Merkado presented 30 works there. Michel Dufet wrote the preface to the exhibition catalog, in which he noted that Merkado "astonishes his contemporaries with the novelty, power, and quality of his creativity" and that he presents "an entirely new universe" for our consideration.1969: Salon de la Jeune Sculpture Prize1970: Auguste Rodin Prize (gold medal)1973: Bourdelle Prize1980: Research Grant (Ministry of Culture and Communication)1981: Salon de Montrouge Prize
