Description

Etruscan-style vase - Rometti Umbertide An elegant, two-handled vase on a tall foot, produced by the renowned Italian manufacturer Ceramiche Rometti of Umbertide in the 1950s. This piece is part of the Umbrian company's collection inspired by archaeology and Etruscan-Greek culture, offering a modernist reinterpretation of classical black-figure vase painting. The exterior surface features a refined matte terracotta-colored finish against which two figures of musicians in motion stand out, hand-painted in glossy black with ochre, white, and brick-red details: a flute player and a lyre/zither player. The side handles, the upper rim, and the stem-like foot are also finished with contrasting glossy black enamel. Underneath the base is the original hand-painted signature in cursive "Rometti Italy", accompanied by the
