Description

This late 19th-century paperweight, which elegantly combines patinated bronze and onyx, stands out as an extremely rare collector's item for display or use on a desk. The sculpture, with its lively narrative quality, depicts a mischievous young skater dressed as a bear cub, wearing a fur hat with small, upright ears and a chiseled fur coat, captured in full motion as he pushes a traditional sled. The curved, graceful lines of the sled form a small storage compartment, adding a functional element to this work imbued with the beauty of winter poetry. The child's facial features and the textured rendering of his outfit demonstrate excellent craftsmanship.The piece rests on a rectangular base of veined onyx in shades of cream and orange, enhanced by a delicate brass frame that underscores the elegance
