Description

This small regional piece of furniture in the Louis XV style, crafted from solid cherry wood, harmoniously combines a closed storage compartment with an open-work draining area at the bottom.It features an upper section closed by a door with a scalloped panel molded in the "gendarme's hat" style, characteristic of the Louis XV style. Its front is embellished with polished brass hardware, including long side spindles and a finely cut, plant-inspired keyhole. The lock is functional, and the interior contains two shelves.In the lower section, the cabinet features an openwork niche with small turned bars, forming a dish rack originally designed for drying dishes. The piece rests on two curved, crow's-foot-style front legs, connected by a beautifully cut lower crossbar that lends elegance
