Description

Navigation sextant marked "Lefebvre Poulin Montrouge (32) No. 433," engraved on the dial. It was manufactured in Montrouge, in the Hauts-de-Seine department, after 1968, most likely in the 1970s.The frame is made of black-painted metal with a granite-textured finish. The dial is graduated from 0 to 120°, and the micrometric drum is graduated in minutes. A cam lever allows for quick adjustment of the alidade. The sextant includes an alidade mirror, a horizon mirror, tilting filter lenses, a sliding-focus sighting tube with a rubber eyecup, a handle, and a white notepad for annotations. The screws and adjustment parts are made of brass.The original case is made of oak, assembled with straight-edge joints. It has a carrying handle, hinges, two locking hooks, and a keyhole, all made of brass.
