Description

A sturdy, large curule chair made of solid mahogany from the mid-19th century. Very well constructed, with bead-shaped support bars on the sides, it is perfectly stable. It can serve as an end table or coffee table, as the seat is flat and can hold a tray, glasses, or large books.The seat upholstery is in very good condition and is fairly recent.The fabric can easily be replaced with a beautiful silk or velvet. There are tiny marks on the wood (paint?), but otherwise it is in excellent condition.
