Description

This beautifully crafted folk art piece is a box skillfully carved from stained oak with a smooth, domed lid. An 18th-century collector's item, it is richly adorned with laurel branches on the lid, as well as grapevines and oak leaves. This beautiful box was originally a Louis XVI-era cutlery case; it embodies all the refinement of that era and has survived to the present day, having left Aurillac--where it was crafted long ago--both useful and beautiful. this curiosity is both decorative and practical, sound and in good condition, much to our delight.
