Description

This coffee table is composed of three elements - a central rectangular part and two demilune ends - which, joined together, trace a large oval, but can also be distributed around the room as independent side tables. Each smoked glass top is bordered with a mirror edging, set within a brass frame with ringed tubular uprights, joined in the lower part by curved stretchers following the curve of the piece.This modular conception and the refinement of the mirror-bordered glass allow this table to be associated with the productions of Maison Jansen, the great Parisian decorating house founded in 1880, whose tripartite coffee tables are among the most ingenious models of the 1960s.Condition report: Good general condition. Brass with a fine even gilt patina, smoked glass and mirror borders possibly
