Description

This console features a white marble top veined with grey, with breakfronts at the corners, bordered by a three-quarter openwork brass gallery. The mahogany apron, underlined by brass fillets and beading, opens with two drawers fitted with drop handles and brass knobs. It rests on four tapered and fluted legs, capped with brass rings and ending in sabots.This revisited Louis XVI vocabulary -- blond mahogany, white marble, openwork gallery, gilt bronzes -- allows this console to be stylistically linked to the production of Maison Jansen, the great Parisian decorating house founded in 1880, which made these refined side pieces one of the classics of its schemes around 1940.Condition report: Good general condition. Mahogany with a fine patina, marble with no visible damage, brasses slightly
